The Department of English presents:

JONI ADAMSON

Rethinking the Commons: How the Humanities, Social Sciences, and Sciences Power Our Struggle for Food and Climate Justice

Thursday, October 25, 2012, 4:00 p.m.
Alumni Lounge, Gerlinger Hall, 1468 University Street

For more information about the Literature and Environment program including upcoming events, visit the English department web site at english.uoregon.edu.

Joni Adamson is an associate professor of English and environmental humanities in the School of Letters and Sciences, a senior research scholar at the Global Institute of Sustainability, a faculty member in Human and Social Dimensions of Science and Technology, and an affiliate of Women and Gender Studies at Arizona State University. She is serving as 2012 president of the Association for the Study Literature and Environment, which has an active membership of 1,450 scholars, educators, students, and scientists in forty-one countries. Adamson is the author of American Indian Literature, Environmental Justice, and Ecocriticism: The Middle Place and coeditor of Keywords in the Study of Environment and Culture. Her work focuses on environmental justice, contested notions of “the commons,” food sovereignty, global indigenous literatures, and organizing for human, civil, and environmental rights.