2014 English Spring London Program Course Guide for UO English Majors

Please note that these terms ONLY apply to the program at the London AHA Centre affiliated with the UO English department, ONLY during Spring 2014, and ONLY for UO English majors. If you are graduating before Fall 2014, you must be sure to complete the third part of the Introduction to the Major sequence (ENG 222) beforehand. Please be aware that ENG 222 is taught only on the UO home campus in Eugene and only in Spring term. This may cause a conflict with the Spring in London program.

All courses (History, English, Art History, and Theatre) can apply to English major requirements. Each course can only apply to one major requirement.

- ARH (British Art of the Last Hundred Years) can apply to the 1789-Present upper-division requirement or the upper-division Elective requirement. The course is equivalent to Art History of British Art & Architecture at the 300 level. The course also satisfies an Arts & Letters General Education requirement.

- HIST (Modern British History, 1939-2007) can apply to the 1789-Present upper-division requirement or the upper-division Elective requirement. This course also satisfies a Social Science General Education requirement.

- TA (London Theatre) can apply to the upper-division Elective requirement.

- ENG (Graphic Novels and Cultural Theory) can apply to the 1789-Present upper-division requirement or the upper-division Literary Theory/Criticism requirement or the upper-division Elective requirement. This course satisfies one upper-division course in the Comics and Cartoon Studies minor and also satisfies an Arts & Letters General Education requirement.

- ENG (Black and Brown London) can apply to the 1789-Present upper-division requirement or the upper-division Elective requirement.

- WR 123 can apply to the second part of the University Writing Requirement (and is equivalent to WR 122)

English majors enrolled in three courses for 15 units can fulfill an additional upper-division Elective requirement by enrolling in Professor Wheeler’s 1-credit (P/N) course, “London Experience.” The course provides students an opportunity to reflect on their London experience and its place in their studies in the English major. The course is equivalent to ENG 401 and only open to English majors. The combined credit for “London Experience” and the three other courses yields 16 units that can be applied toward four upper-division English major requirements. Please note, if you have already completed your two upper-division Electives (or will by the end of Spring 2014 with other courses), the “London Experience” will not allow you to complete any additional English major requirements.
