Course Overview: The trials and tribulations of adolescence have long served as the central focus for myriad authors and filmmakers. In this course we will closely analyze contemporary literature and film made for adults, but concerned primarily with the teenage experience. We will read two novels and a novella and watch two feature films. We will examine why the teenage years serve as such a preoccupation for so many authors and auteurs, and look at what these depictions tell us about not only our culture’s view of adolescence but also of itself, as a whole.

Some questions we will examine are: What do these depictions of teenage life say about our culture’s notions of childhood and adulthood? What do coming of age stories tell us about the particular values of our society? And, importantly, what cultural mores, moralities, fears or ambivalences are projected through these portrayals of teenage life?

Course Objectives: By the end of this course, you will not only have improved your understanding of the use of adolescence in contemporary film and literature, you will also be able to critically analyze both written and visual texts. You will be able to compose short and long college-level analytical papers. You will be able to devise your own arguments and offer support for those arguments. You will be able to effectively participate in and facilitate course discussions, as well as engage in online discussions. You will be able to offer peer feedback on your classmates’ work. In short, you will leave this course with competency in the key elements needed for success in the college classroom.

Required Texts/Materials:
Books:
Lorrie Moore, Who Will Run the Frog Hospital? Vintage, 2004

Films:
Harold and Maude, dir. Hal Ashby, 1971
Maria Full of Grace, dir. Josh Marston, 2004

All books are available at the University Bookstore. All books and films are on Reserve at the Knight library.

Course Assignments: Along with active participation in all discussions, the course requirements are:
▪ Five two-page papers in response to course books and films
▪ Participation in five online discussion board conversations
▪ Small group facilitation of half of one class session (40 minutes)
▪ Two drafts of a final 5-7 page critical analysis paper about an outside book or film

Paper formatting: For all papers, the margins should be standard margins in Microsoft Word: 1 inch on top and bottom, 1.25 inches on left and right. The font should be 12-point Times New Roman. The author’s name, the course, the assignment type, and the date should be single-spaced at the top of the left-hand corner on the first page. The remainder of the document should be double-spaced. There should be no line breaks between the title and the start of the essay or Participation: Active participation is necessary for this course to succeed. This includes speaking in large and small groups and facilitating discussions. If speaking in a group is difficult for you, come see me early in the term to discuss strategies for participation.

Attendance: Attendance is mandatory. You are expected to show up on-time and prepared for every class. You are allowed one unexcused absence. Each unexcused absence after the first will result in the final course grade being lowered by one half. Absences will be excused only if you have official documentation from a credible authority of illness or other emergency. If you must be absent, you are responsible for turning in all assignments by the start of the missed class session. Assignments will not be accepted via email. They must be turned into the classroom or 102 PLC. You are also responsible for any homework assigned on the day of your absence. It is your responsibility to find out about missed assignments from classmates, Miriam or Blackboard.

A Note about Movies: In this course, film and literature will both be treated as text. That is to say, both will be read closely and carefully. Films will be watched once in class and then you are expected to watch it again outside of class (both films are available on reserve in the Knight library). The first viewing is for absorbing overall content. A second viewing is required to more closely examine the details of the story and production.

Late Assignments: Late work will not be accepted.
