Early Shakespeare

Description

Although we remember Shakespeare as a playwright, in his own lifetime his first and most popular published work was a poem, Venus and Adonis. This piece runs contrary to how Shakespeare is often remembered today: concerned less with marriage than sex, as much with gods and animals as humans, and less with story or character than the intoxicating power of language. This course asks how we might read Shakespeare differently if we took Venus and Adonis as a starting point. We'll read this fascinating early work, and then follow it with three plays, each in a different genre, that echo some of its style and concerns.

Course Texts and Costs

Editions of Shakespeare vary widely, from the quality of their notes to assigning speeches to different characters. Students must purchase the specific editions listed below.

Assignments

Attendance and Class Preparation: Coming to class with the day’s reading is mandatory. Missing more than three classes will result in your final grade being lowered by 2.5 points for each additional absence. More than seven absences will cause you to fail the course. Reading an act of Shakespeare for this class should take you at least an hour, more likely two. Read carefully, and give yourself time for note-taking, studying the editor’s comments, and looking up unfamiliar words and references. Coming to class without the text or without having done the reading will count as an absence.

Participation, 10%: Participation is an important component of the class. Aim to make one substantive comment in class per week. If a student is shy or has other difficulties with speaking in class, I’m happy to hear their thoughts in office hours or by email.

2 Exams, 20% each: Exams will cover all the material from one half of the term. They are designed to make sure you have kept up with the readings, lectures, and discussions. They will take about two hours to complete and may consist of multiple choice questions, passage identification, and/or short essays. Preparation time will vary, but I recommend at least 6 hours of study spread over a few days.

2 Short Papers, 25% each: Each short paper is designed to help you practice a particular skill important to analyzing Shakespeare. The prompt for each paper will be given out one week in advance, and the assignment will be due at the beginning of class. Each paper will be 3-4 pages of written work and should take about 6 hours to complete.

Workload

According to the UO Student Engagement Advisory, a 4-credit course should involve no more than 120 hours of work, in class and out, over the course of the term.

Policies

Accessibility: Please let me know me if there are aspects of the instruction or design of this course that result in disability-related barriers to your participation. You are also encouraged to contact the Accessible Education Center (formerly Disability Services) in 164 Oregon Hall at 541-346-1155 or uoaec@uoregon.edu.

Formatting Papers: Your assignments must be in twelve-point font, double-spaced, and have one-inch margins. Submitting assignments electronically is acceptable, but you need to use .doc(x) or .pdf format (not .pages or .odt). You can follow either MLA or Chicago guidelines for citations, but be consistent. Great guides to either format can be found at Purdue’s OWL website (https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/). You are expected to proofread your work; too many errors will result in a small penalty to your grade.

Late Assignments: I give out extensions readily, but you need to ask in advance. Exceptions may be given for emergencies and other drastic situations. Late assignments are graded down one letter grade per day late. Assignments are due at the beginning of class unless stated otherwise; assignments turned in after that will be considered a day late. Papers will be accepted in print, by email, or by Canvas.

Plagiarism: All work must be your own and written solely for this class. Plagiarism can be unintentional, so be careful and make sure you understand the rules. If you’re not certain, ask me. If you quote, paraphrase, or borrow ideas from an article, website, editor's note, friend, or any other outside source, you need to provide documentation. I encourage you to look at the library's guides for citing sources and avoiding plagiarism (https://library.uoregon.edu/citing). The same link will also allow you to access the university's official policy toward academic misconduct; you should read over the policy if you’re unclear on what counts as cheating or plagiarism.

If you're struggling with a paper, I encourage you to contact me. It’s better to submit a paper late, unfinished, or in poor quality than risk the penalties for plagiarizing.

English Language Learners: Anyone can succeed in this class whether or not English is their primary language. You will likely have some additional challenges: readings and papers will take longer to complete, participating in class discussion may be more intimidating. If you’re having trouble with participation, you can earn points by sharing your ideas in email or office hours. If you’re struggling with readings or papers, come to office hours and we can discuss. You should know that grammar, syntax, and spelling are a relatively minor part of paper grades. As with all students, I expect you to show care with your language, but your argument is what is most important.

Advisory: Be aware that the material we read for this course can be disturbing in its treatment of sexuality and violence, and our discussions will cover these topics. If you feel you can’t participate in discussion around a particular issue or text, let me know and I will try to design alternative work.
