Colloquium in Poetry and Poetics

This colloquium has been conceived by the faculty in the Structured Emphasis in Poetry and Poetics as a means to introduce graduate students in the structured emphasis to a significant selection of the texts in the history of poetics drawn from our list of readings. The colloquium is intended as a seminar in which the faculty in the Structured Emphasis in Poetry and Poetics present the readings in poetics which they have found to be important to their own fields and to demonstrate how those critical or theoretical texts might guide the interpretation of or activate the engagement with some exemplary poems.

This year the following faculty will lead our nine sessions: Karen Ford, Paul Peppis, Lara Bovilsky, Jim Crosswhite, Brent Dawson, Mark Quigley, and Tres Pyle. Each session a faculty member will focus on one or two decisive texts selected from the Western history of poetic theory and place those texts in conversation with relevant poems. Our mission is to address some fundamental questions in poetic theory and form as they are exemplified or resisted by poetic texts in the long historical range of our Anglophone poetic culture. The theoretical texts are items drawn from the Structured Emphasis Reading List, one which doctoral students have used as a breadth field. The poems -- which might be traditional verse forms or other more expansive examples of the "poetic" -- will also be chosen by the leaders of each seminar.

All readings will be posted on Canvas, along with opportunities for group discussions outside of the seminar sessions. While there are no written assignments for this seminar, students will be expected to complete the assigned readings in advance of the sessions and to be prepared to participate in the weekly seminar. Each session is conducted by the faculty member responsible for the topic and the readings; but since all the faculty in the structured emphasis are invited to attend the colloquium, students can expect other faculty members to be present for any session.

Schedule of Readings and Presentations

Introduction
1 Apr: “Two ‘Vital Tendencies’ of Romantic Poetics” (Pyle)
   Percy Shelley, “A Defence of Poetry,” “Hymn to Intellectual Beauty”

8 Apr: “Words into Poems” (Ford)
   Readings: Steele, from All the Fun’s in How You Say a Thing: An Explanation of Meter and Versification
   Poems: Hughes, Brooks, Cullen, Emanuel, Knight
   Poetry Kit: “The Ballad of Rudolph Reed” (Brooks)
15 Apr: “Allegory: Theories of Errant Meaning” (Dawson)
   Readings: Spenser, from The Fairie Queen, 1.1
             Fletcher, from Allegory: Theory of a Symbolic Mode
             Empson, from Seven Types of Ambiguity

22 Apr: “Intertextual Creativity: Translation, Imitation, Innovation” (Bovilsky)
   Readings: Wyatt, Surrey, Petrarch, selected lyrics
             Greene, from The Light in Troy

29 Apr: “Mimesis, Figure, and Affect” (Bovilsky)
   Readings: Shakespeare, selected sonnets
             Sidney, from Defense of Poesie
             Rosenfeld, from Indecorous Thinking

6 May: “Yeats: Myth, Monument, and ‘the filthy modern tide’” (Quigley)
   Readings: de Man, from “Image and Emblem in Yeats”
             Yeats, selected poems

13 May: “Heidegger and Humanism” (Crosswhite)
   Readings: Heidegger, “Hölderlin and the Essence of Poetry”
             Agamben, “What is a Destituent Power?”
             Schnackenberg, from Heavenly Questions

20 May: “A vast panorama of chaos and anarchy: The Waste Land and the Poetics of Impersonality” (Peppis)
             “The Metaphysical Poets,” The Waste Land

27 May: Memorial Day Holiday

3 June: “Benjamin and a Poetics of History” (Pyle)
   Readings: Benjamin, from Origins of German Tragic Drama, “On Some Motifs in Baudelaire,” “Theses on the Concept of History
             Percy Shelley, “Ode on the West Wind”
             Graham, “Fission”