What We Will Do In Class

Theater games, story circle, pizza, practice the show!
Welcome to Living Theater!

In this class, UO students and adults from local disability and Deaf communities will create and act in a play based on our own stories, writing, and music. The class is free to community members with disabilities.

Every Monday evening right after class, Tracktown Pizza will treat us to pizza and sodas.

It’s important to come to class every single time unless you are sick or have very important reasons to be somewhere else.

In this class everyone will:

Get to know each other, listen carefully to others, play movement and theater games, tell stories, work together on the play, practice our parts and do other jobs, and put on the play on June 8 and 10 at 2 here in Global Scholars Hall Great Room.

You also have a choice of many other jobs:

Acting, ASL shadowing, writing scenes or songs, editing the script, lighting, sound, costumes, props, music, dance, or publicity.

Days When Something Different Happens:

Wednesday, May 9: Class meets in LIBRARY 101 instead of Global Scholars Hall.
Monday, May 28: Memorial Day holiday. No class.

Evaluation for UO Students:

50% Performing your jobs for the play well
40% Class participation and constructive interactions with your fellow students

10% Attendance
